"This contract," said Mayor Mc-Clellan, "expires in September. It is apparent that the construction company is not going to live up to its contract. Why has this been kept from the Board and the public? I move that the Chief Engineer be instructed o make a full report on the condition of the Brooklyn tunnel. We seem to have been deceived."

The motion was unanimously adopted. The Board then proceeded to repudiate the despairing cry of Mr. Boardman, counsel to the Rapid Transit Board, who proclaimed when he was fighting the Elsberg bill that private interests would not bid on any more tunnels and that the city could not build any because its borrowing capacity was under $50,000,000. President Alexander E. Orr said that there seemed to have been a misapprehension and that the Board felt fully justified in laying out plans for new subways.
